Project plan mixes houses, industry, open space

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Representatives of a firm proposing a 198-acre planned community in northeast Upland stressed the project's mix of housing, clean industry, recreational areas and other amenities during the city's initial review Thursday night.

The special meeting of the Upland Planning Commission served as an introduction to the proposal submitted by The Mayer Group Inc. of Downey.

The firm is seeking a general plan amendment from the city that would allow development of the planned community over at least five years.

A draft environmental impact report, the first Upland has ever received on a project, has been submitted for review and comment by various agencies. Total building costs for residential, commercial and industrial segments of the proposal are nearly $57 million, the report estimates.

Although planning commissioners asked a variety of questions Thursday, they have not yet received copies of the preliminary environmental report and more extensive review of the far-reaching proposal will come later.

Planning Director Bill Young said preparation for the final environmental impact report — which the city council must approve before or concurrently with the general plan amendment — depends on the response of agencies studying the plans.

He added that the project could be back before the commission at its meeting Feb. 22.

Gary Goldsmith, project manager for the firm, said The Mayer Group has put in six months of "exhaustive work" in preparing the project with the help of a variety of consultants.

Although the firm plans to concentrate on residential aspects of the project, Goldsmith said The Mayer Group will retain some control over the commercial and industrial sites.

The land is located between Campus Avenue and Cucamonga Creek, south of an extension of 17th Street and north of an extension of 15th Street. The 198 acres are currently vacant and serve as flood-control plain.

Although the broad outlines of the project were the same as presented in a preliminary report sent to the city late last week, Goldsmith noted several revisions and said the project may be further modified in the future.

Seven acres are devoted to a commercial center at the northeast corner of 16th Street and Campus Avenue.

A "business park" would cover 40 acres in the northeast part of the project. Goldsmith said light industrial uses would be available on one-acre lots that could be combined.

He added that the industrial uses foreseen would not bring heavy truck traffic to the area.

Residential uses now account for 123 acres with some 725 units in all. The mix of housing types is: 285 two-story townhouses on 25 acres, 245 "patio" homes on 35 acres and 195 single-family homes on 63 acres.

Goldsmith said a key feature of the patio homes is the "zero lot line" concept. Homes would have one side yard of five feet or less, but 15-20 feet on the other for patio or other uses, he said.

Goldsmith showed color slides of past projects by The Mayer Group that included extensive use of water as a landscaping feature. He pointed out the project proposes to place a shallow lake (18-inch maximum depth) in a residential area and a waterfall for the commercial center.

He said greenbelt areas, open space and recreational areas — including tennis courts, pools and a park-like strip along the southern edge of the project — total some 45 acres.

Sale of the property is currently in escrow. Wednesday's edition of The Daily Report incorrectly stated all of the acreage is owned by the San Antonio Land Co.

Actually, the land company owns the project land south of 16th Street and San Antonio Water Co. owns the property north of 16th. The city of Upland is a shareholder in each company.

He said both the northern boundary of the project and 16th Street would be heavily buffered against the noise and visual impact of quarry operations in the north and traffic along 16th.

Future truck traffic from the quarry would generally leave the city by a proposed road eastward into Rancho Cucamonga, Goldsmith said.

In response to a question by Chairman Frank Carpenter, Goldsmith said the firm has no definite plans on how a proposed seven-acre elementary school site might be transferred — by sale, exchange or dedication — to the Upland School District.

Commissioner John Zinda requested Goldsmith to investigate the economic feasibility of the project without the 40-acre industrial site, noting past city concerns about industrial land adjacent to residential development.

Upland school board will take another look at unification

After listening to concerns raised by its superintendent, the Upland School District Board of Education decided last week to take another look at a proposal to reorganize nine West End school districts.

The board called a special meeting for 7:30 p.m. Jan. 30 in the library of Upland Junior High School, 444 E. 11th St.

That meeting will preceed a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 7 at Upland High School for residents to comment on the unification plan.

The San Bernardino County Committee on School District Organization approved a tentative proposal creating three unified school districts — Ontario-Montclair, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga — in December.

On its only vote on the issue Oct. 10, the Upland school board split 2-2, with Trustee Dina Ross Hunter absent. Mrs. Hunter did not indicate support or opposition to the proposal Tuesday, but said the special meeting is needed in order to hear more information.

Trustee Bill Rugg called for the special meeting after Superintendent George Renworth outlined a number of concerns over the unification proposal.

The board was unanimous in its vote to review the question again and requested attendance of a representative of the county committee and the Chaffey Joint Union High School District, which includes Upland.

Renworth said the county committee has not really studied the unification question in detail.

"They have not addressed themselves to the school building problems — the fact that Upland would not be able to accommodate 500 (more) students," he said.

He added that costs related to unification and personnel adjustments have not been looked at in detail either.

Renworth said, "There has been no indication what would happen to special programs, such as continuing education. The Chaffey High School district offers quite a few programs that may not be manageable in a smaller district."

He stressed that his largest concern is over the division of property from the Chaffey High School district.

Most of the real property is located in what would become the Ontario-Montclair unified district, he noted.

"Three high schools, two special high schools, the district offices, all other district facilities — such as maintenance yards — are all located in the Ontario-Montclair school area," he said.

Movable property would be divided on the basis of enrollment, and Renworth noted the Ontario-Montclair district would end up with the bulk of this property.

Upland ordinance in effect

Drug-related goods cleared from shelves

One record shop cleared some shelves and another is covering up, but both Upland shops are complying so far with the city's new ordinance restricting sale and display of drug paraphernalia.

The ordinance went into effect last week, making Upland the second city in California to test local regulation of the sale and display of drug paraphernalia at businesses open to minors.

Although the first day of the new ordinance passed without a hitch, one lawsuit — and possibly two — is expected to be filed soon against the code amendment.

Tracy Huttner — assistant manager of The Wherehouse, 360 W. Foothill Blvd. — said shop employees cleared the record store's shelves of marijuana-related devices Tuesday evening.

The paraphernalia was temporarily placed in a back room and the store will no longer sell the devices, she said.

Because of its location just east of Upland High School, The Wherehouse was the main target of Upland's ordinance aimed at preventing exposure of drug paraphernalia to persons under 18.

Jan Verdries — proprietor of Atlantis Records and Gifts, 110 E. Ninth St. — began working Wednesday on a wooden partition closing off the counters and shelves carrying paraphernalia.

He is enclosing a section of the store about 25 feet long with the partition, which will have curtains blocking both entrances and shelf covers hiding the devices inside.

Verdries said he is going ahead with preparations for a suit to have the Upland ordinance thrown out in court, adding that he is confident of winning the legal battle.

Along with constitutional questions, a key issue in the suit will be whether state law pre-empts Upland's ordinance.

Upland's ordinance declares sale and display of narcotic paraphernalia a public nuisance in any business where minors not accompanied by a parent or legal guardian are admitted.

Continued sales of drug-related devices — roach clips, water pipes and other marijuana accessories — are permitted at businesses open to minors only if displays are in a separate room or enclosure.

Glasshead Inc. — a Los Angeles manufacturer of marijuana devices — lost the first round of a legal battle earlier this month challenging a similar ordinance in Lakewood.

The Lakewood ordinance served as a model for Upland's.

Dan Fagan, attorney for Verdries, said he is working with Howard Rosoff, attorney for Glasshead, toward a possible joint suit against the Upland ordinance.

However, he added that he wants to file action against Upland as soon as possible, probably by next week.

Rosoff said he did not know when Glasshead might be ready to sue Upland. He also said he is exploring the possibility of beginning the suit at the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, a tactic Fagan disagrees with.

Fagan plans to file suit at West Valley Superior Court in Ontario, asking for a temporary restraining order and then a preliminary injunction.

Glasshead failed in its bid to win preliminary injunction.

Verdries said the enclosure for Atlantis Records and Gifts has cost him several hundred dollars so far.

He said he did not know how the enclosure will affect sales of the devices. Verdries called these sales "very seasonal," ranging from "nil" to perhaps half his business.

He asked why the same logic of the ordinance is not applied to liquor stores or sporting goods shops displaying guns.

Verdries contended a burglary at his store involving a minor led the boy's father to mount a campaign against the record stores and eventual adoption of the ordinance.

Police Chief Coy Estes confirmed the burglary, but noted city officials have received other complaints, including PTA objections.

Estes said Verdries is showing "good faith" in his efforts to comply with ordinance, and both the police chief and City Attorney Donald Maroney indicated the city will give him time to complete his partition.

Although complying, Verdries said, "The thing (ordinance) itself is ridiculous."

Julie Harrison, a clerk at Atlantis Records and Gifts in downtown Upland, displays paraphernalia the store is putting under wraps. Upland's ordinance restricting the sale and display of drug-related devices went into effect last week, making the city the second in California to try local regulation of paraphernalia at businesses open to minors. City won't double-bill residents

Incoming Upland residents will not be "double billed" under a new sewer connection charge being studied by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy told the Upland City Council last week that a provision in a contract for a million-dollar "package" treatment plant specifies that the city's current $225 connection charge will not be added onto the new fee being studied.

The council authorized Upland to enter a contract agreement with Ontario and the Cucamonga County Water District serving Rancho Cucamonga for the package treatment plant.

McCarthy had expressed concern that language in a proposal for a $700 Chino Basin district connection charge was unclear on whether the figure would make Upland's total charge $925.

The council endorsed the $700 connection charge and other fees Jan. 2.

Funds will be used to help pay for expansion and operation of regional sewage treatment plants. The Chino Basin board approved an expansion program estimated at more than $60 million in 1977.

Although city officials criticized a provision added to the treatment plant contract stipulating the cost be paid in 24 months, City Engineer Fred Blanchard said that as a "practical matter" the clause will not affect Upland.

Blanchard said the city has already raised nearly all of its share of the cost of the facility through the existing $225 connection charge.

He noted the provision was added by members of the Chino Basin district not directly involved in the agreement.

Upland town hall meeting draws 150 residents

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Upland's first town hall meeting in nearly seven years attracted some 150 residents Monday night for a wide-ranging discussion of city problems and spending priorities for the post-Proposition 13 era.

Members of Paramedics-Upland FireFighters (PUFF), a citizens' committee, made a strong pitch for city council support on bringing public paramedic service to Upland through the fire department.

Representatives of Citizens for Youth Activities (CFYA) stressed that needs of youth sports organizations should place high in budget priorities and again asked for the council's help in meeting field electricity costs passed from the city to the groups last year.

And although many of the other topics Monday night at the Upland High School auditorium revolved around public service improvements, residents also wanted to know what the city is doing to carry out the spirit of Proposition 13.

City Manager Lee Travers said, "In our budget this year, our determination was that the city would live within its income — that we would not overspend anticipated revenue.

"That necessitated ceasing some services, reducing other services," he said.

He noted the city's recent survey of residents on budget priorities addressed Upland operations with which the city has some flexibility over expenditures.

About half of Upland's current $12.9 million budget is made up of restricted funds, money that can be used only for designated purposes.

Travers said the city has now tallied 111 questionnaires. Residents' choices in order of priority for services were:

Police services, fire and emergency first aid, street lighting, library, street maintenance, traffic control, flood control, street cleaning, park and parkway maintenance, street tree trimming and spraying, engineering, recreation, sidewalk maintenance, land-use planning, animal control and street weed removal.

About one-third of the 15 speakers urged the council to support bringing public paramedic service to the Upland Fire Department.

Anita Lewis of PUFF called public paramedic service a community "asset" and "necessity." She noted the $115,000 plus personnel costs for an aerial platform truck recommended for the city by a consulting firm would go a long way toward beginning funding for paramedics.

In a recent study, Fire Protection Engineers of San Francisco cited the department's need for the $115,000 truck and also supported introducing public paramedics.

Joe Piscioneri — co-chairman of PUFF and Ontario Fire Department division chief in charge of paramedic training — told the audience how Ontario paramedics helped save his mother's life in early 1976.

He noted ambulance paramedics are not always available because they take patients to hospitals outside Upland.

Piscioneri estimated personnel costs for seven firefighter-paramedics at $160,000 for one year. Soroptimist International of Ontario-Upland has pledged to raise $26,000 to buy the city a rescue vehicle. Equiping that vehicle would add another $22,000.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy said, "I don't think there's anybody sitting up here (four members of the city council) who would argue with the need or the desirability of starting a paramedic program in the city.

"The community is going to have to get together to try to resolve how we would fund a paramedic program," he said.

Bob Spalding, president of CFYA, urged city officials to work with the organization to find a way to meet youth baseball groups' new expense for lighting fields.

He said neither the Upland PONY League nor the Upland Colt League currently have funding to meet this season's electrical bills. Spalding said he is seeking some arrangement with the city so the PONY League's lights will not be turned off as of Feb. 1.

Councilman Frank Hoover said he has received community commitments totaling $1,000 so far to help out the leagues.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas stressed that the city and the community generally must take a more creative approach to solving problems in light of Proposition 13 property tax limits.

Joe Hohl told officials that many of Upland's problems are "really growth problems" created when services do not keep up with new development.

Although Upland's growth-management plan currently restricts city review to 500 dwelling units annually, Hohl suggested Upland may need to more "radically restrict growth."

In answer to one resident's questions, Police Chief Coy Estes said he maintains an "open door policy" and will see citizens without appointments whenever possible.

A large contingent of city administrative employees were present to answer questions. Mary Ann Reiss, Upland's personnel officer, told one speaker the city has 30 fewer employees today than before Proposition 13 due to layoffs and unfilled positions left vacant through attrition.

Upland held its last town hall meeting in May 1972. Poor attendance led to council reluctance to hold further town halls, but public interest in last year's budget sessions helped revive the idea.

Councilman Bill Bottin, who first suggested holding another town hall in 1976, called Monday night's turnout a "success" and added that he hopes the town hall will become a regular feature of the city.

Ontario's jobless rate drops to four-year low

Ontario's unemployment rate has dropped to its lowest level in at least four years in a continuing bright local job picture.

The most recent figures available fix the local unemployment rate at 6.6 percent in November.

Glenn Rankin, manager of the Ontario office of the state Employment Development Department, said unemployment claims since then indicate little change in the local employment situation.

He said he expects some rise in the unemployment rate for January due to seasonal layoffs.

Rankin said the 6.6 percent rate is the lowest since he began keeping records in 1974 when there was a recession and a high level of joblessness.

Rankin's figures indicate the number of employed persons grew to 32,032 in November, up 2.1 percent, increasing faster than the labor force (all persons having or seeking jobs), which grew 1 percent to 34,293.

The total of unemployed persons seeking work dropped 11 percent to 2,261.

Rankin said his office is experiencing especially strong demand for machinists, licensed auto mechanics, day workers, registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses, typists who can type 60 words per minute and stenographers who can take down 80 to 100 words per minute in shorthand.

Edison sees increased conservation savings

Customers of Southern California Edison Company are expected to save more than three billion kilowatt-hours of electricity on an annual basis as a result of conservation programs planned during 1979, the electric utility says.

In a report filed with the California Public Utilities Commission, Edison said 1979 will mark the company's seventh year of formal conservation and load management activities.

"During 1979, a number of innovative conservation programs will continue to tackle the problem of energy waste and help to moderate the growth of electric peak demand," said Edward A. Myers, Jr., Edison vice president.

He said the electric utility has earmarked approximately $20 million during the coming year to continue ongoing programs and initiate new activities aimed at further conservation and load management on the Edison system.

Myers estimated that the 1979 conservation program, when successfully implemented, would lower anticipated 12-month kilowatt-hour sales by 1.2 billion and reduce system demand by more than 201 megawatts.

Systematic Training for Effective Parenting will be offered in a series of nine sessions by West End Child Development Centers, 118 W. Granada Court, Ontario, on Thursday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m., beginning Feb. 1. The classes are under the leadership of an experienced professional who has worked extensively with parents and children.

The topics to be discussed include understanding the child's behavior and misbehavior, understanding one's self as a parent, building the child's confidence and feelings of self-worth, actively listening to the child, open expression of parents' feelings and desires, use of logical and natural consequences to develop self-discipline, conducting the family meeting, and building parental self-confidence. Parents who have previously participated in this STEP program have found it to be very beneficial. A small fee will be charged to cover nominal costs, $20 for one parent, $25 for a couple.

Interested persons may call the Center, 983-2578, give their name, phone number, and specify interest in the STEP Programs; their call will be returned and appropriate information provided. Or they may send their check, and indicate their desire to participate.

West End Child Development Centers, a non-profit, tax-exempt organization sponsored in part by United Way, serves families with limited resources, using a sliding scale to cover operating costs; fees are based on ability to pay.

The centers' services are geared to pre-school, elementary, and junior high age children who have behavior disorders, learning disabilities, emotional disturbances, motor-perception problems, and similar home-school difficulties. The services include counseling, a medical clinic using volunteer doctors at no cost, tutoring when related to other problems, motor remediation, and psychological assessment. Professional interns, licensed professionals, and lay volunteers plan, supervise, and provide the services.

Referrals are usually made by school personnel, but parents may request help by calling 983-2578. A volunteer will return the call and send information and application forms.

Come see Victorian house

Chatting over the picket fence in front of the blue and white Victorian house, 403 W. G St., Ontario, are Marion Messina and Richard Ault. They are dressed in clothes circa 1900 as they talk about the Victorian House Tour set for Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the picturesque dwelling. The Upland Junior Women's Club is sponsoring the three-day event as a benefit for charities. The renovated house will be used for professional offices after the open house event.

A pretty gingerbread house on G Street in Ontario has been a home, a shop and has been left empty at times.

Those who have passed by over the years in horse and wagon, Model T's and sports cars have hardly noticed the house.

It took Beverly Inman of Ontario to see the possibilities of bringing out the beauty of the house which had been hidden beneath many coats of dark paint.

"We have not been able to really pin down the date the house was built," she said. It is guessed by its architecture to have been put up early in the 1900s.

Under Ms. Inman's direction, the old paint was scrapped off and the blue and white paint put on the exterior. Repairs were made inside and out.

People began to ask about the house — what is it going to be used for? Those passing by have been delighted with the transformation.

Now interested persons will have a chance to see the inside as the Upland Junior Women's Club is sponsoring a Victorian House Tour on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the home 403 W. G St., Ontario. Proceeds will benefit the San Bernardino County Heart Association and other local charities.

Tours will be from noon to 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Ms. Inman, president of the Upland Juniors, has supervised the renovations for six months.

Decorations for the rooms is being done by the following: front room, Ontario Historical Landmarks Society; den, Stillinger-Petras Interior Design of Pomona; dining room, Tobias Furniture of Ontario; kitchen, Chaffey Community Cultural Center, coordinated by Marlene Stevens; master bedroom, nursery and screen porch, Creative Interiors of Upland; bedroom, Koopman's Furniture of Montclair; and children's bedroom and playroom, Vicki Alexander Antiques.

After the three tour days, the gingerbread house will be used for professional offices.

Coming down the stairs in the Victorian house, 403 W. G St., Ontario, is Ruthe Gillette. She is showing Bryce Denton of the Ontario Historical Landmarks Society a kitten. Ms. Gillette and Denton are working on the Victorian House Tour to be held Thursday and Friday from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the blue and white gingerbread house. Beverly Inman, president of the Upland Junior Women's Club, has been supervising the renovations for six months. The Juniors are sponsoring the tours as a charity benefit. (Staff photos by H. In wake of controversy

Textbooks available to public

Apparently mindful of last year's controversial disposal of textbooks at Elderberry School, the Ontario-Montclair School District has established a list of unusable textbooks, set them aside in the district warehouse, and will allow the public to take them free of charge during the month of January.

Those interested in obtaining more information may call the district library at 983-9501, or may come to the district wharehouse, located at 950 W. D St., Ontario, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, until Feb. 1.

Not only are science and math textbooks available, but also history, literature, geography and spelling books as well, according to Mary Pierson, district librarian.

The district is being as cautious as it can in identifying and disposing of unusable or obsolete textbooks because "few things ever get more public reaction than the adoption or destruction of textbooks," said Bob Bell, assistant superintendent in charge of instruction.

Both Bell and Mrs. Pierson explained that state and federal legislation requires books which include racial slurs, sexist pictures, faulty information, or simply an imbalance of information, be declared obsolete and unusable.

"Some of them may be perfectly good books until you start looking at them closely," Mrs. Pierson said.

Although state and federal legislation helps identify unusable or obsolete textbooks, getting rid of them is another problem entirely.

"It's not cost efficient for us to have them in the warehouse taking up space and never being used," Bell said, "and it's a real disservice not to put them up for donation.

"But our problem is finding people who want them," he said. "Even parochial schools usually have their own textbooks and are not bound by the rules that we are."

"With some large private schools they're able to get state texts as we are and don't want old ones any more than we do," Mrs. Pierson added.

Is there a state or nationwide clearing house where such books can be sent?

"No, and that's the problem," Bell said. "We ought to just send them back to the state.

"I've never been able to find a central place that will take care of giving away the books and I don't know why we can't," Bell said.

He added, "I picked out many of the books myself to see what was wrong with them, and we've also been working closely with each school's library to screen unusable textbooks."

Laurie Becker, 25, a Montclair resident and a senior library clerk for the district library at the Ontario-Montclair School District offices, places books in a box at the district library warehouse. The unused and obsolete textbooks are now on display and can be taken without charge by interested West End residents. The library is currently removing the unusable textbooks and district officials would rather give the books away than throw them away. (Staff photo by Ken Swart)

Time for a break

Kristi Logan, a security employee at Ontario International Airport, settles back with a newspaper when work is slow. Miss Logan, 19, of Ontario runs an X-ray machine to check the contents of baggage. About an hour and half of her shift is slower than the rest of the time when passenger traffic keeps her busy. She takes a moment here to relax in an airport waiting area. Post-'13' targets

County draws ahead of budget cut plans

By PETER WONG
Staff Writer

San Bernardino County government is doing better than expected in achieving post-Proposition 13 budget targets, the county board of supervisors was told Tuesday.

County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin said the lower spending should result in a larger surplus than the $1.8 million originally forecast by June 30.

"Based on the spend-down progress for the first six months, and if departments meet the spend-down objectives for the second half of the year, the county general fund will have a year-end surplus of $3 million," Goodwin said in his report.

Goodwin said the county's surplus for the first six months was about $1.2 million. He recommended that the money should be held in reserve for the 1979-80 budget and should not be spent for new county services.

After passage of Proposition 13 last year, Goodwin's staff prepared and the supervisors adopted a plan that will gradually trim county spending to specified levels by June 30 of this year.

The plan is aimed particularly at county services which have depended chiefly upon property taxes for their income. The plan attempts to make further spending cuts unnecessary after the middle of this year.

The county's general fund budget for this year is $242.7 million, compared with $260.7 million before Proposition 13. The figures exclude all special accounts largely unaffected by the state constitutional amendment.

In December, Goodwin said county government was cutting spending faster than expected because employees were leaving in greater numbers.

The 1978-79 budget eliminated 515 jobs from the county's 7,000-plus work force. Of the 162 jobs that weren't vacant, only 28 employees remain, Goodwin told the supervisors Tuesday.

"And some of those will quit anyway," Supervisor Robert O. Townsend of Chino said.

The rest have voluntarily transferred to other jobs within county government or have left, Goodwin said.

So far, county government has avoided major layoffs. Goodwin said some may be necessary in the future, particularly if specialists cannot be reassigned to other jobs. But he said he would not make such recommendations until April.

However, county government is having trouble recruiting employees for certain positions, largely because of a state-imposed pay freeze.

Martin E. Nelson, assistant county administrative officer for personnel, said the county is having particular problems with computer programmers, mechanics and nurses — "any field where we're in competition with the private sector."

The county received more than $40 million in state surplus money last year to help it cope with Proposition 13.

The state agreed for one year to pay for counties' shares of welfare and Medi-Cal costs and to give the counties block grants. It also waived for one year the state requirement of a 10 percent county share of mental health programs.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has proposed a continuation of that aid for one more year as part of the 1979-80 state budget.

Children need health check-ups

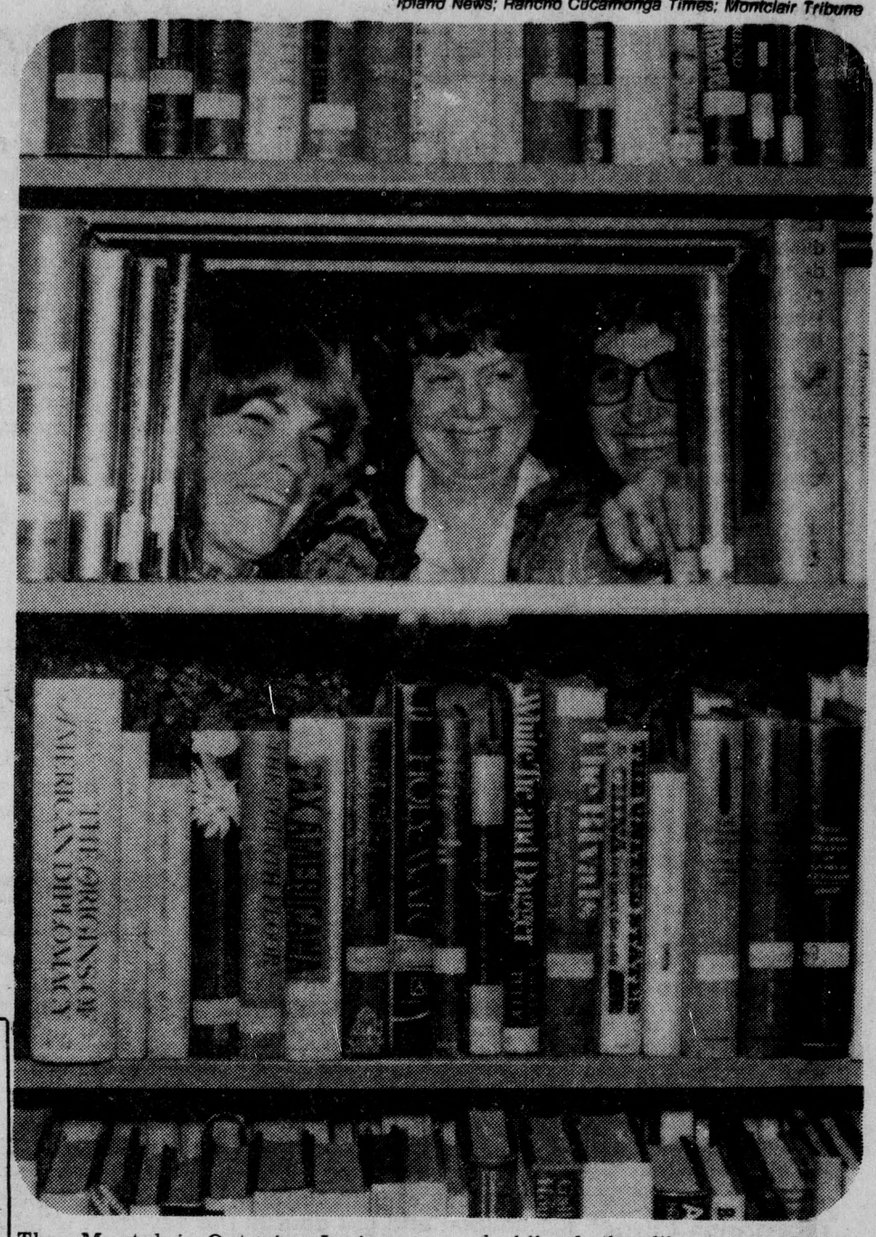

How do you know if your child is really healthy?

Even children who appear to be active and healthy may have hidden health problems. Many health problems, if detected early, are easier to correct, save medical costs and can prevent the problem from becoming serious. Finding these problems is the purpose of the Child Health and Disability Prevention Program.

In an attempt to promote the health of California's children, the state legislature requires that all children have a health check-up within 18 months prior to entering first grade.

For information on how your child can receive a physical examination contact your family physician or the Public Health Department in the Ontario area at 988-1312 and in the Chino area at 627-3649.

Teen delegates hope to pass program

By RICHARD PERAZA
Staff Writer

A youthful delegation of 11 West End teen-agers will fly to the state's Capitol Feb. 1 with hopes of passing a comprehensive medical care program.

Don't expect state-operated health clinics to open up in the West End, though. The teen-agers are members of the YMCA's Youth in Government program and they'll be borrowing the state Capitol for their yearly conference.

"It's like living a fantasy and being in government," Steve Smith, 18, of Alta Loma said. "I'm a senator."

The state Legislature will be in recess, away from the Capitol, "and for a whole week, it's ours," Smith said.

The cost per student, including air fare and hotel bills, is about $90, according to Smith.

He said the group will hold a car wash to help raise money but any amount outstanding will have to come from their own pockets.

Smith said the February session will be Youth in Government's 31st year and the local delegation is looking forward to meeting several state officials.

The YMCA group is open to all high-school-age students who are interested in government, he said.

The local delegation will drive to Long Beach and board a charter jet to Sacramento Feb. 1, Smith said.

Once in Sacramento, the group will come to grips with an agenda containing about 80 proposed bills, he said.

He has confidence in the West End's proposed medical care program.

The bill would use state money to create a medical university in Sacramento that would offer tuition cuts of 20 to 40 percent to students based on their financial need.

The money for building the university would eventually be repaid by tuition.

The graduated students, in return for discounted tuitions, would be required to serve four years in a state medical facility following internship.

Facilities would be set up in major California cities including San Bernardino, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento and Eureka.

The program would be operated by the state medical board and overseen by the American Medical

West End youth taking part in the program in Sacramento are Smith; Rob Bedinger, 15, Upland High School; Mike Burton, 16, Chaffey High School; Damien Leon, 16, Alta Loma High School; Tina Meyers, 15, Alta Loma High School; Anita Roha, 15, Alta Loma High School; Jenelle Coffler, 15, Alta Loma High School; Terry Broham, 15, Alta Loma High School; Phil Abrasiota, 15, Chino High School;Scott Westerlund, 16, Chaffey High School; and Kelly Rosenthal, 15, Chaffey High School.

Jim Steffens, of the West End YMCA, also will be going along as the group's adviser.

Cheerleaders yell to first place spot

Proving that their mouths are as good as any, the Alta Loma Junior High School cheerleaders placed first at the Southwestern Cheerleading Clinic.

Competing against other Southern California schools, the Alta Loma Junior High School cheerleading squad demonstrated through a variety of cheers that what their advisors, Mrs. Christine Blum and Mrs. Sheryl Rogers, had taught them was the correct thing.

The cheerleaders, Debbie Allison, Belinda Alvarado, Marie Avila, Bonnie Gavel, Sheri Hockmeyer, Mindy Kirmsse, Debbie Reece, and Sheri Van Den Eikhof, traveled to Anaheim for the competition.

Ayala seeking state probe of West End gangs

State Sen. Ruben S. Ayala has called for another investigation by the attorney general's office of youth gangs in the West End, particularly in Chino.

Ayala, D-32nd District, called the first investigation in 1976 "a whitewash." The investigation was conducted by former Attorney General Evelle J. Younger.

In a letter to George Deukmejian, the former Senate Republican leader who became attorney general last week, Ayala said:

"Many of us feel the investigation (in 1976) was not thorough. I feel that an investigation by your department into the gang activities at this time is in order and could prevent such a tragedy from happening in the future."

Ayala's reference to "tragedy" was to the murder of two persons who were standing guard outside Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Chino during an anti-vandalism patrol in 1976.

The church had been a target of vandalism by youth gangs which may have had connections with inmate gangs in three Chino area prisons, particularly the California Institution for Men. The case remains unsolved.

Ayala said he had discussed the possibility of a second investigation with Deukmejian during the campaign. Ayala said he sent the letter as a reminder.

Younger was the Republican nominee for governor. He lost to Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in November.

In a letter after the 1976 investigation, Younger told Ayala:

"The criminal gang problem in the Chino area does not stem primarily from prison-related drug traffic or prison gangs.

"The primary source of this activity is the 'Chino Sinners' gang, a long-established local group, comprised primarily of Chino natives.

"Although many older members have been in prison, it is not believed that their criminal activities are either directed by or closely connected with the major prison gangs or prison drug traffic."

Ayala said he believes the 1976 investigation was handled "sloppily."

Participants sought for Olympics

The Western San Bernardino County Special Olympics wants to reach more persons.

A large portion of the retarded population in the California and the West End are not benefiting from Special Olympics according to statistics from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

To help alleviate this, the Ontario Recreation Department will provide information and medical forms for anyone interested in participating in the Western San Bernardino County area meet scheduled for April.

Special Olympics is an international program of sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded children and adults, 8 years old and up.

Locally, training programs are conducted by recreation departments, schools, workshops and residential facilities, according to John Kramer, Ontario Recreation Department specialist.

Approximately 20 percent of the area participants compete in the state games set for late spring at UCLA and some will go on to compete in the International Games held in August in New York. It's fairly easy to identify the retarded who aren't being reached, Kramer stated.

To compete, participants must submit a physical form with $1 to the State Committee by Feb. 1.

Anyone interested in involving a child or adult in Special Olympics can receive a medical form and more information by contacting Kramer at the Ontario Recreation Department Office, 217 S. Lemon Ave., Ontario.

No new money for flood control seen next year, engineers told

By DONALD J. NEWMAN
Staff Writer

Tuesday was a bleak day for West End city engineers who were told by county officials there would probably be no money for new flood control projects next year.

The engineers attended a session of the county flood control district's advisory board hoping to receive support for millions of dollars in project proposals for new storm drains and drainage channels. Chino alone had four proposals that would cost about $13 million, according to Ray Wellington, city engineer.

But before the engineers ever made their presentations, Flood Control Engineer C. J. "Dino" Pietro told them that reductions in state financial assistance and lost income due to Proposition 13 made it unlikely any new projects would be funded in fiscal year 1979-80.

The district's primary source of money, property taxes, was reduced by 67 percent, Pietro said, citing a preliminary budget study. Pre-Proposition 13 revenue was cut from $3.9 million to $1.2 million.

"We are left without any funding available for the undertaking of new projects," he told his audience of city officials.

Pietro said the situation was further aggravated by a 50 percent reduction in state funds available to reimburse local jurisdictions for expenses tied to federally-funded projects.

Jurisdictions across the state will be competing for the remaining $2.5 million and the county has received no commitment from the state for any portion of that, he said.

This year, the flood control district received about $1 million toward the cost of the Cucamonga Creek Channel project being built across the West End by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Without this extra money the district will experience a "cash flow problem," according to Pietro.

To make matters worse, the district is facing a $600,000 deficit by the end of this fiscal year "which we can't do," he said, adding that the district must find some money by the end of the year.

If the situation does not change, the district is anticipating a $3.2 million defict the following year, according to Pietro.

"We have no commitments (for financial assistance) from anyone at this time — it's a bleak picture," lamented the engineer.

"We're going to have to look at other sources (of funds) — to essentially borrow money," something the district can legally do if it can obtain a maximum of 6 percent interest, he said.

"If we are fortunate to get some supplemental funding it might reduce our deficit," he continued.

He suggested that the flood control district advisory committee study the proposed projects and rank them according to priority "just in case something good happens and we get all kinds of money from someplace."

Projects would be funded according to their priority and the district would use whatever money was available even if it paid for only a portion of a project, he said.

James Kindig, the district's chief civil engineer, offered a few suggestions for raising the district's income.

Most of the discussion centered around a possible ordinance that would implement "acreage fees," or charging a developer a sum of money for each acre he develops. This money would be set aside for new construction.

However, noted Kindig, the county could not do that without adopting a storm drain master plan as the legal basis for the fees. Although the district has a proposed master plan designed about 10 years ago, the study was never adopted. Some cities in the West End are using it anyway.

The county could also consider setting up special benefit districts in local areas, continued Kindig, explaining these essentially would be assessment districts where a system's users would pay the expenses.

Board Chairman Robert Mills told his colleagues that as far as the drainage fee was concerned, "I still feel ideally that it's the best way to go."

Ontario Mayor Robert Ellingwood, a board member, urged the board to work through the state Legislature seeking assistance with the district's financial woes.

The district's budget for this year is about $9 million and does include some new construction. Next year's expenditures are expected to reach about $6 million.

Pietro said that the entire budget will be taken up by operating expenses and staff expenses which have been trimmed to the bone.

Upland church construction

Crane moves steel beam, part of the roof frame, in place at St. Joseph Church now under construction in Upland. An artist's drawing of the new church is shown at left. The 12,000-square-foot, circular church, 132 feet in diameter, will have no columns of support inside. Because of the circular design, 820 people will be in a "very intimate atmosphere" seated 225 degrees around the altar, with no one further from the altar than 58 feet, said architect Joseph Dameron of La Jolla. Target date for completion is June 1979. (Staff photos)

In snow country

Winter picnics for big appetites

With snow on the ground in many areas of the country, people are swapping their running shoes for cross-country skis in order to continue their exercise regime.

All winter sports offer a great excuse for getting outdoors, and, whether it's skiing, skating or ice fishing, a winter picnic adds to the enjoyment of the season.

What goes into the winter picnic basket?

Well, for starters, the backpack often replaces the traditional wicker basket that's used during the summer since the outdoors sportsman can strap the pack on his back and carry it into the woods.

A thermos of steaming hot coffee or soup, snacks including fruit, and sandwich or salad ingredients can be tucked into the pack.

Although it's cooler during the winter months, it's still important to take the same precautions that are suggested for summer picnic foods.

The key words to remember are scrub, chill and insulate.

Clean all work surfaces and utensils such as knives between each use and refrigerator chill all foods before placing them in insulated containers.

Mayonnaise, often mistakenly accused of being the villain in cases of food poisoning on summer picnics, is an important year-round picnic ingredient.

Since it contains lemon juice, vinegar and salt, mayonnaise actually helps to protect the mixture when it's used as an ingredient.

The following picnic recipes were created in the mayonnaise kitchens especially for winter picnics.

Chicken Citrus Salad

½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup thawed orange juice concentrate
½ teaspoon crushed dried tarragon leaves
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
2 cups cooked diced chicken
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup sliced water chestnuts

In medium bowl stir together mayonnaise, orange juice concentrate, tarragon, salt and pepper. Add chicken, celery and water chestnuts; toss until well mixed. Cover and refrigerate. Makes 3½ cups.

Skier's Spread

1/3 cup real mayonnaise
2 tablespoons corn oil margarine, melted
1½ tablespoons cream sherry
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon dried dill weed
¼ teaspoon chopped chives
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 package (6 oz) frozen, cooked shrimp, thawed, finely chopped
¼ cup chopped water chestnuts
2 tablespoons minced onion

In medium bowl stir together mayonnaise, margarine, sherry, lemon juice, dill, chives, salt and pepper until well blended. Stir in shrimp, water chestnuts and onion. Pack into container and cover; refrigerate overnight. Serve as spread for black or other hearty bread. Makes 1½ cups.

Tuna Spread: Follow recipe for Skier's Spread. Use 1 can (7 oz) tuna, drained, finely chopped in place of shrimp. Makes 1½ cups.

Cheese and Sausage Loaf

¾ pound sharp Cheddar cheese, finely shredded
1/3 cup mayonnaise
1 jar (4 oz) pimiento, well drained, chopped
1 can (2 oz) anchovies, drained, finely chopped
1 loaf (12 in) French bread
4 ounces cooked, skinned kielbasa, cut lengthwise into eighths
2 sweet gherkins, quartered lengthwise
1 hard-cooked egg, cut lengthwise into eighths

In medium bowl stir together cheese and mayonnaise until smooth. Stir in pimiento and anchovies. Cut bread in half horizontally. Hollow out each bread half leaving ½-inch thick shell. (Removed bread may be dried for later use as bread crumbs.) Fill each bread shell with 1/3 of the cheese mixture, spreading evenly to line each shell.

Working lengthwise, place a row of 4 kielbasa sticks down the center of one cheese-lined bread half. On one side of the kielbasa row, alternately arrange in a lengthwise fashion, 2 of the pickle sticks and 2 of the egg pieces (placing yolk side down).

Repeat on other side of kielbasa row. On second cheese-lined bread half, place a row of pickle sticks down the center. On one side of the pickle row alternately arrange 2 egg pieces and 2 kielbasa sticks. Repeat on other side of pickle row. Using remaining cheese mixture, spread over each loaf. Place bread halves together and press firmly. Wrap tightly in foil. Secure with 6 rubber bands placed tightly around loaf at evenly placed intervals. For ease in slicing loaf refrigerate at least 8 hours. To serve: unwrap, cut off ends and slice into thin slices (about ¼ inch thick). Makes about 40 slices.

This cheese and sausage loaf travels in a cross-country skier's backpack to a winter picnic site. Have this with a steaming cup of coffee from the thermos along with some fruit to revive tired bodies for the long trip back.

Recession seen as consumers end a spending spree

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

At last, the consensus of economists is for a recession in 1979.

What finally pushed them into the negative camp was the very obvious fatigue of the consumer. Saddled with the highest debt levels in history, the consumer will, sensibly, close the purse and stop the spending spree.

If the Federal Reserve and the Carter administration try to coax the consumer to spend more by continuing to pump up the money supply, it might be a little like pushing on a string. Even if the Fed pumps money into the banks and the banks in turn shriek "BORROW, BORROW" all year, chances are the consumer won't be nibbling.

As in the events leading up to both the 1970-71 and 1973-75 recessions, it was the conservative economists who foresaw the problems early.

This is because the conservatives (monetarists, supply side fiscalists, Austrian School hard money analysts and old-syle free enterprisers) tend to focus on government spending, government deficits, money supply growth, currency exchange rates, interest rates and the amount of debt (consumer, corporate, governmental) which is accumulating.

These factors were flashing negative signals as early as mid-1977; that is why it was a mere handful of conservatives who accurately foresaw double-digit inflation and interest rates in 1978. As the year progressed their numbers grew — and finally, in December, the odds tilted in their favor.

The final arbiter should be Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz., the newsletter which monitors 40 forecasts each month. Early this month, Blue Chip found, for the first time, that 21 of its 40 forecasters expect a 1979 recession.

Collectively, the 40 forecasters are looking for a mere 2.1 percent real (inflation adjusted) economic growth next year — down dramatically from their 2.5 percent consensus n November. The forecasters expect consumer durables expenditures to rise by only 5.2 percent (in current dollars, not inflation adjusted dollars), down from 6.2 in November. If that 5.2 percent growth is adjusted for inflation, it falls into the negative column; consumers' expenditures for such things as autos and appliancs will drop in real terms.

Said Robert Eggert, the retired RCA economist who puts out Blue Chip Economic Indicators, in an interview, "The majority of the group now expects a mild recession in 1979, with the impact coming in the second and third quarter.

"The biggest reason is the consumer. He as been using an awful lot of credit. The extensions of installment credit recently got as high as 18.5 percent of disposable personal income (purchasing power) — the prior peak in 1973 had only been 18.2 percent. The peak before that had been 17.8 percent."

These Pine trees can thrive in Pomona smog

By KAREN ALTMAN
Staff Writer

When Pomona wood plant owner Frank Robertson saw a magazine ad several years ago for "miracle" pine trees, his business mind went into gear.

"I thought, what a great gimmick," Robertson said. "I'd buy the trees, plant them in the forest and put stickers on my products saying, 'By buying this you've helped reforest the San Bernardino National Forest.'"

Robertson was skeptical of the advertiser's claim that the tree — Mondell Pine, or pinus eldarica — would grow as tall in two years as the man who planted it.

But he sectioned off space behind his decorative wood products business, Woodland Products, and planted the trees. To his surprise, they grew from 12 inches to 12 feet in two years.

He never used the "gimmick." Now Robertson is so captivated by the trees that he would like to make a second career cultivating them.

He isn't the only enthusiastic supporter of the tree. According to the distributor — Jerry Shepard of West Sedona, Ariz. — the tree thrives in extreme heat, needs no special care and is strongly resistant to disease and environmental damage.

Shepard's claims are substantiated by Dr. Fred Widmoyer of New Mexico State University, who has been studying the tree since 1964.

"This tree grew much faster than all the other trees we planted in desert regions," Widmoyer said last week.

"However, it will not grow above 5,000 feet and is not resistant to all types of temperature and exposure."

Native to Pakistan, the tree grows best in a semi-arid climate similar in many respects to the southwestern United States. Air pollution and drought won't bother it but extreme moisture will.

Robertson is attempting to dispute the claim that the tree won't grow above 4,000 or 5,000 feet. He has experimental plantings at his father's farm in the Lucerne Valley at 3,500 feet.

Robertson nurtures the 1,400 pines at his Pomona farm with a secret blend of fertilizer and plant food.

"Jerry Shepard came to see my plants and told me no one else has achieved such growth and height," the 44-year-old Upland resident said proudly.

He says he has never used any type of pesticide on his plants. "But I have one man working full time just catching gophers. I lost 75 trees last year to gophers."

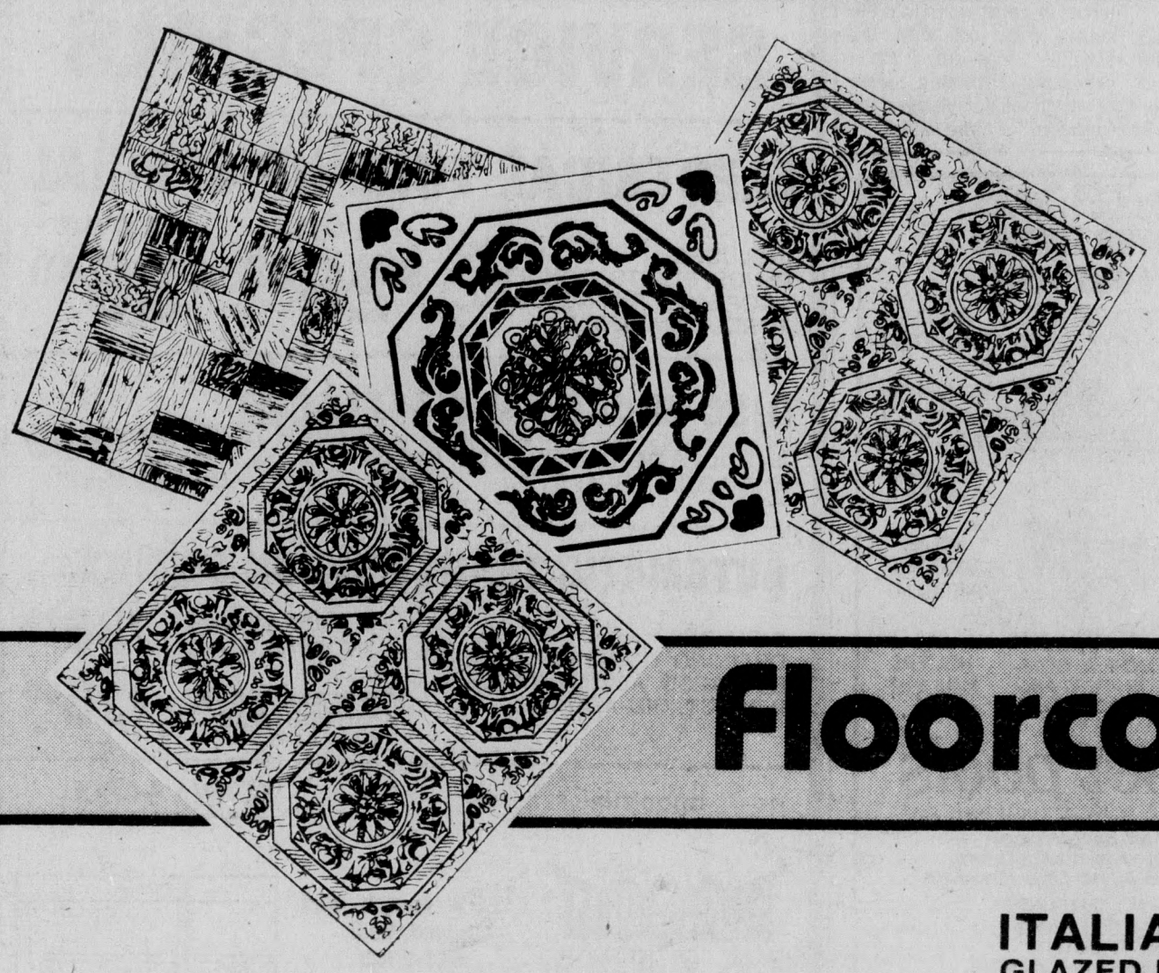

The trees have been used for pulp production, lumber, veneer and plywood, chipboard and flakeboard, chemicals and fuel, and even as Christmas trees.

Robertson's five children sold the trees this past Christmas. It was then that Robertson discovered something else about the tree — it seems to be fire retardant.

To demonstrate, he took a tree that had been cut nine weeks before, stuffed a newspaper into it and set it afire.

The tree burned for about a minute and after 25 percent had been consumed, the fire went out.

But when Robertson asked fire officials if he could advertise the tree as fire proof, he was told "absolutely not."

Humpback whales may have lured ancient mariners to their deaths

By ROBERT ESTILL
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Was the legendary "siren song" that lured ancient mariners to rocky Mediterranean shoals actually a ballad rendered by amorous humpback whales?

That is one possibility suggested by Roger Payne, a New York Zoological Society marine biologist. He has been studying whales for a dozen years and recently has been recording the humpback's songs in waters off Bermuda and Hawaii.

The haunting, eerie song of the humpback filled the auditorium of the National Geographic Society recently as Payne outlined his findings to the news media.

The cries of the humpback whales are "probably the longest, loudest and slowest songs in nature," Payne said.

The songs, long complex sequences of repeated phrases, vary in pitch from a squeaky treble to a rumbling bass and last from six to 30 minutes.

It is very slow; but when speeded up 14 times, it sounds amazingly like a birdsong.

These 40- to 50-ton vocalists have no problem with delivery; no mere canaries are they.

"Having your head a yard away from a singing humpback whale is like having your head a yard away from a jet engine at full rev," Payne said.

But the factor that separates the humpback's song from other animal melodies is its changing nature.

By analyzing songs over a period of years, Payne and his fellow researchers have found that the songs gradually change from year to year, adding new elements.

Payne concluded that the whales not only are compulsive singers, but also are "irrepressible composers" that constantly incorporate new elements into their old songs.

And, while the humpbacks in Hawaii may be singing a different song in the same year than their brethren in Bermuda waters, the songs obey the same laws of change and have the same structure.

Getting back to that siren song theory, Payne noted that the songs reverberate throughout the hull of a wooden boat, making it impossible to pinpoint the origin.

Under such circumstances, he suggests it is easy to see how the ancient Greek king, Odysseus, might have lashed himself to a mast to keep from being lured by the song.

Just what the song might convey is an enigma.

To suggest that the humpback's song, like that of a woodthrush, is a means of attracting attention or announcing territorial claims does not explain why the song changes, Payne said.

"I have come up against an entirely blank wall," he said.

"It is a mystery. And because the species is an endangered species, it is an endangered mystery."

The humpbacks, which numbered about 100,000 before whalers thinned their ranks, now number about 7,000 and are protected by international maritime laws.

Payne and Sylvia Earle, a California Academy of Sciences research biologist, did find that the songs are sung mostly at night and in tropical waters during the winter breeding season.

The adult males are the known singers, although the possibility of female vocalists is not ruled out.

When there was more than one whale singing, they were singing the same song — but not in unison or any recognizable harmony, Payne said.

The song could be an invitation to some sort of activity the researchers have not been able to determine.

"When the song stops, whoever came up to join the singer goes off with the singer in a sort of a carousing, tumbling melee of which we do not know the function," Payne said.

One thing they did discern was that the humpback lives up to its gentle, non-aggressive reputation.

Earle, an experienced diver, said she entered the water with apprehension about being so close to something so big moving at her so fast.

She noticed that an underwater photographer was unmindful of an approaching whale and could have been decapitated by the whale's giant flipper. At the last moment, the whale flited its flipper, missing the photographer by iches.

That is more concern for life than humans have shown whales. she noted.

The humpback's songs soon will be getting wide exposure.

National Geographic, which financed part of the research, is including in its January edition a recording of the humpback's song. The magazine had ordered 10.5 million copies.

Conserving water doesn't necessitate less comfort

When you think of conserving water, chances are you expect to deny your family some of the conveniences to which they are accustomed.

Not so, says the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau.

There are many ways that you can save water that won't hurt their standard of living. Some water - saving techniques actually enhance the comfort and convenience of your family and save money too.

These water - saving tips come from the bureau:

— Have leaky faucets fixed or replaced. An "average" leak wastes up to 5,000 gallons a month, at an estimated cost of about $40 a year. If the leak is from a hot water faucet, add from $30 to $40 for heating the water.

— If you're about to remodel or add a bathroom, ask your plumbing contractor if you should include one of the new water-saving water closets. They use only half as much water with no loss of efficiency.

— If you have an old - fashioned showerhead, replace it. New ones on the market use less water and increase enjoyment of the shower since they permit you to regulate the spray.

— Add an automatic temperature control to your shower. It will enable you to preset the temperature before turning on the water. A family of four averages about 1,400 shower baths a year. Hand-valve showers waste about 2.5 gallons of hot water while the bather adjusts the water temperature. An automatic control will save you up to an estimated $40 a year in water and fuel. It also will prevent sudden surges of scalding or icy water.

— Equip your faucets with aerators. They introduce millions of air bubbles into the water. You use less water because it suds up faster.

— Leaky toilet tanks waste from 3,000 to 5,000 gallons of water a month, costing you from $30 to $40 a year. They are simple to repair.

— Use full loads when using your dishwasher or washing clothes. You'll save not only water but fuel too.

— If your water is hard, consider having a water softener installed. Untold amounts of water, not to mention soap and detergent, are wasted when doing household tasks with hard water because you need more to get the job done.

— Some authorities claim close to 50 percent of the water from a municipal system is wasted. Consciously work at saving water until it becomes a habit. For example, stopper your sink whenever you wash dishes by hand. Stack them and rinse them with a hose spray. Don't leave the water running while shaving. Keep drinking water in the refrigerator instead of letting it run to cool it.

"Better water management" is a term people will be hearing a lot in the months to come. It refers not only to water conservation but also to pollution control. This calls for the cooperation of government, business and industry with strong support from the public.

Action by Carter opposed

The West End Republican Assembly's Board of Directors has passed an emergency resolution opposing "President Carter's attempt to abandon our faithful ally, the Republic of China, Taiwan, by granting full diplomatic recognition to Red China and by conceding to the Communist Chinese demand that 'there' is but one China and Taiwan is a part of (Communist) China.' "

Dr. Ron Davis, president of the West End Republican Assembly, stated, "Conceding that Taiwan is a part of mainland Communist China is a step toward allowing Communist China to forcefully take over Taiwan.

"The Carter policy violates the Mutual Defense Treaty between the USA and the Republican of China (Taiwan) signed Dec. 2, 1954 and bodes ominously toward America's willingness to fulfill treaty obligation to other allies."

Davis said Carter's attempt to circumvent the Congress in abrogating the treaty with Taiwan is a step toward an "imperial presidency" and agreed with Sen. Goldwater that the step should be challenged in the courts.

Plant annuals for spring

Try bright calling cards

Getting the jump on spring is easy to do in California and is always a pleasant sort of upmanship in the garden. The pleasure of living in the Golden State is increased by the amount of early color that's available to brighten the cool season.

There are shrubs such as camellias which bloom all winter and others such as flowering quince which show color long before we expect them to. But neither of these — nor any shrub for that matter — makes as bright a calling card for spring as a bed of annuals.

Who can deny that spring has sprung when he picks pansies, calendulas and Iceland poppies from his garden?

These and others are available for planting this month and next, according to the California Association of Nurserymen.

Additional color-bearers for planting now include sweet alyssum, violas, fairy primroses, snapdragons and stock.

Marigolds, a native American flower, are easy to grow and offer long-lasting beauty for garden and home. The marigold story began when discovered by Cortez, who took seeds back to Spain with him.

Marigold wasn't always beautiful flower of today

Ask any gardener, "What's a favorite, easy-to-grow flower for long-lasting beauty both in your garden and home?"

The quick reply will often be marigolds.

This native American flower was first appreciated by Cortez when he conquered ancient Mexico. He took seeds back to Spain with him. There marigolds became the favorite flower of the devout to place at the altar of the Virgin Mary. Because of that, they were called Mary's gold and then marigold, the name now used in the United States and most other English-speaking countries.

Marigolds were not always the brilliant, glamorous beauties now enjoyed in garden displays and indoor bouquets.

Burpee's 1877 catalog listed six varieties of marygolds.

Easy-to-grow? That was their best feature. They were late blooming; the flowers were small and scrawny; the color range was limited; and the foliage was rank and smelly.

About 1920, however, the marigold future began to look up. David Burpee needed a successor to the sweet pea, which had been the most popular garden flower until root rot became a problem wherever summers were hot ... and that was most of the United States.

The marigold had plenty of flaws but also great possibilities. It wasn't bothered by pests, diseases or weather. It would grow just about anywhere under the sun. But it sorely needed to be made more beautiful and versatile if it were to become a garden cinderella.

Taking up the challenge, Burpee and his flower breeders over the years have hybridized, deodorized and glamourized marigolds until now there are types to suit just about every taste and garden need: huge or small-flowered; tall, medium or short; with or without odored foliage; more colors ranging from the long elusive white through shades of yellow to gold, orange and mahogany red.

The year 1939 marked a giant step forward in the progress of marigolds. Burpee's red and gold hybrid marigold was introduced to the gardening public — the first hybrid flower from seed to be offered for commercial sale in the United States.

Today, 40 years later, red and gold hybrid marigold is still very popular because it blooms fast from seed; its bushy hedge-like plants are covered with masses of medium-large, double, solid red and red-and-gold combination blossoms; and it keeps right on blooming profusely until heavy frost.

In fact the flowers are often the most beautiful in the fall when they take on especially deep, rich tones.

Not only are they a picture in the garden, they're just as striking indoors in copper or pottery containers ... carefree and long-lasting too.

Bouquets picked at Fordhook Farms in October were enjoyed in the living room for three weeks; the same flowers stayed fresh with just a few changes of water.

Red and gold hybrid marigold pioneered a bonanza of hybrid beauties: the giant-flowered climax hybrid marigolds, spectacular for garden backgrounds, award-winners at flower shows; the great lady hybrid series for a stunning summer - to - autumn floral hedge that resists wind and rain damage; the dwarf everblooming "Mule" hybrids, the nuggets and red seven star marigolds that start a spectacular colorama in six weeks from seed and keep the show going until a severe fall freeze.

An impact of Proposition 13 worries state's businesses

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — The biggest worry troubling business and industry in California as the 1978-79 session of the Legislature gets under way is one that doesn't directly affect the business community — yet. It's the effect of resales on residential properties under Prop. 13.

Robert T. Monagan, president of the California Manufacturer's Association, put it this way in an interview:

"Under Prop. 13, real property can be reassessed to current market value every time it is sold. However, residential property sells many times more frequently than commercial, industrial or business property, so the net result over a period of time will be a disproportionate share of taxation being paid by homeowners.

"This, then, would lead inevitably to the real worry of business," he explained — "that the legislature will say, aha, not only did business get a big break under Prop. 13 but now the residential taxpayers will be paying proportionately more and more of the property tax bill. Let's sock it to business!"

It was no idle worry. As Monagan was speaking, Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy was disclosing in the state capitol a few blocks away that he already was drafting legislation that would seek to freeze residential property assessments at current levels and put any resulting losses in future tax revenues onto business. It is likely, sources said, that the McCarthy plan — an amended version of his ACA 2 which died in the closing moments of the last session in August — would call for a split assessment roll that would freeze the proportion of taxes paid by residential property owners and allow reassessment of commercial property.

"We are philosophically opposed to the split roll," Monagan said. "It's like eating one peanut; where does it stop?"

Although the emphasis varies with their individual interests, all sections of the business community are pretty much in agreement that the major battlefields in the new Legislature will all add up to "13." Representatives of the Manufacturer's Association, the California State Chamber of Commerce, the California Taxpayers Association, and the California Conference of Employers Associations gathered informally to compare notes in a strategy session a few days ago that concluded that the big problems for 1979 will be:

— The legislature's efforts to cope with the aftermath of Prop. 13.

— Efforts by local government to continue the state's post - Prop. 13 "bailout" of the locals with surplus state funds, which leads to the real crux of the problem: Where will the money come from when the surplus has been spent?

— Efforts to separate business into a separate, and more costly, tax assessment category through a split roll.

— What kind of a spending limitation will be enacted by the Legislature, or will business support the new Paul Gann effort to enact such a limitation by initiative at the 1980 primary election?

— Will the Legislature again deal with the inventory tax, which Monagan described as "now more of a nuisance tax that ought to be abolished?" Prop. 13 reduced income to the state from $900 million to $230 million annually, he pointed out. He added that the inventory tax is "no longer a major item of concern to segments such as retailing than to major industry."

— How the Legislature deals with the unsolved unitary tax problem could be another concern, he said.

Other major problems that business will face in the new Legislature, Monagan said, include:

— Strong pushes for increases in unemployment insurance compensation benefits. "We hope," he said, "that at the time any benefit increases are voted they can be financed out of revisions in the program itself rather than a higher assessment on business."

— A renewed push for mandatory overtime which business opposed strenuously in the last session.

— A fight against a potential proposal to penalize business by special taxation when it leaves the state. "No state yet has passed such legislation," Monagan said, "but it is being studied by some in the California Legislature. We don't think the idea will fly ... it's a negative approach to a problem that could better be solved by making California more attractive for business to stay — but it is emblematic of the nuisance - kind of issues with which we must cope."

PUBLIC NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 1194

AN ORDINANCE EXTENDING AN INTERIM MORATORIUM ON THE FILING OF APPLICATIONS FOR PARCELING OF LAND, REZONING BUILDING PERMITS FOR ANY NEW CONSTRUCTION OR CONVERSION OF RESIDENTIAL STRUCTURES TO COMMERCIAL STRUCTURES AND/OR OTHER CHANGE OF USES IN AN AREA CONSISTING OF 400 FEET ON EACH SIDE OF THE CENTERLINE OF EUCLID AVENUE EXTENDING FROM THE CITY'S SOUTH CITY LIMITS TO THE SOUTH SIDE OF EUGENE COURT

The City Council of the City of Upland does ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

That heretofore on the 2nd day of October, 1978, the City Council adopted Ordinance No. 1182 imposing an interim moratorium on the filing of applications for parceling land, rezoning building permits and other change of uses in an area consisting of 400 feet on each side of the centerline of Euclid Avenue extending from the City's south City Limits to the south side of Eugene Court for a period of ninety (90) days from adoption of said ordinance on the 2nd day of October, 1978.

That the law made and provided allows said period to be extended after hearing. That upon the hearing for the extension of said interim ordinance it was determined by the City Council that additional time is required to finish the comprehensive plan and land use regulations for the area to be studied.

SECTION 2. EXTENSION OF MORATORIUM.

For an additional period of one-hundred fifty (150) days from the adoption of this ordinance extending the Interim Ordinance No. 1182, no land use permits, including building permits and conversions of residential to commercial use, shall be issued by the City nor shall any zoning, rezoning or parcel maps be adopted by the City on any property in an area extending 400 feet from each side of the centerline of Euclid Avenue from the City's south City Limits to the south side of Eugene Court.

SECTION 3. EXEMPTIONS.

The same exemptions shall apply in the extended period of this ordinance as applied to the period of the original interim moratorium.

SECTION 4. URGENCY AND TAKING EFFECT.

This Ordinance is an urgency ordinance and is for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and welfare. The facts constituting the urgency are those set forth in the Findings above - mentioned and in the Findings set forth in Ordinance No. 1182. The city recognizes that it will take substantial time for the Planning Commission and the City Council to study and consider all the facets required to be studied to make a plan for the area above - mentioned which protects the aesthetic beauty of Euclid Avenue and to provide substantial development which will not be detrimental to the standards of traffic circulation, population density, and which will not be detrimental or injurious to the property and improvements of the neighborhoods now located on Euclid Avenue.

SECTION 6.

The Mayor shall sign this Ordinance extending the effectiveness of Ordinance 1182, and the City Clerk shall certify to the passage and adoption of this Ordinance, and said Ordinance shall be effective immediately upon its adoption by this Council as an urgency Ordinance.
